GAGAN: Navigating India's Skies with Precision

Evolution of GAGAN

A Landmark Achievement in 2026

GAGAN reached a defining milestone in June 2026, when the Directorate General of Civil Aviation (DGCA) successfully conducted India's first satellite-based landing system (SLS) approach on a commercial jet aircraft using the indigenous GAGAN system. The demonstration was carried out on an IndiGo Airbus A320 at Udaipur Airport, marking the first time a commercial jet in India executed a satellite-guided precision approach using GAGAN.

Unlike conventional landing procedures that rely on expensive ground-based radio navigation aids such as the Instrument Landing System

As India emerges as one of the world's fastest-growing aviation markets, the demand for safe, accurate and reliable navigation has become more important than ever. Every aircraft depends on precise positioning to ensure safe take-offs, en-route navigation and landings. Even small errors in satellite signals can affect flight operations, particularly during poor weather or in difficult terrain.

Recognising this strategic need, the Indian Space Research Organisation (ISRO) and the Airports Authority of India (AAI) jointly developed the GPS Aided GEO Augmented Navigation (GAGAN), India's indigenous Satellite-Based Augmentation System (SBAS). More than just another satellite technology, GAGAN represents India's growing capability to build world-class navigation infrastructure while reducing dependence on foreign systems. It also reflects the broader vision of Aatmanirbhar Bharat in critical technologies.

Why Does India Need GAGAN?

The Global Positioning System (GPS) enables aircraft to determine their position anywhere in the world. However, GPS signals are not always perfectly accurate. Atmospheric disturbances, signal delays and other factors can reduce their precision.

For aviation, where safety standards are uncompromising, these errors must be corrected immediately. This is where GAGAN plays a crucial role.

Instead of replacing GPS, GAGAN enhances it by providing:

- Real-time correction signals that improve positioning accuracy.
- Integrity information, which immediately alerts pilots if a GPS signal is unreliable.
- Safer and more efficient aircraft navigation, especially during landing approaches.

In simple terms, GAGAN acts as an intelligent quality-control system for GPS, ensuring that pilots receive navigation information they can trust.

What is a Satellite-Based Augmentation System (SBAS)?

A Satellite-Based Augmentation System improves the accuracy and reliability of existing satellite navigation systems such as GPS.

Its functioning can be understood in four simple steps:

- Ground stations continuously monitor GPS signals.
- Control centres identify any errors in those signals.

- Corrections are generated almost instantly.

- Geostationary satellites broadcast these corrections back to aircraft.

The result is navigation that is significantly more accurate, reliable and safer than using GPS alone.

India's Journey to an Elite Global Club

GAGAN became fully operational in 2015, placing India among a select group of countries possessing an operational SBAS.

Only a handful of regions have developed such advanced systems, including:

- The United States – Wide Area Augmentation System (WAAS)
- Europe – European Geostationary Navigation Overlay Service (EGNOS)
- Japan – Multi-functional Satellite Augmentation System (MSAS)
- India – GPS Aided GEO Augmented Navigation (GAGAN)

An important distinction is that GAGAN is the first SBAS certified for operations in the equatorial region, where ionospheric disturbances are generally more challenging for satellite navigation.

This achievement demonstrates India's growing competence in solving complex technological problems suited to tropical conditions.

(ILS), the GAGAN-enabled approach used satellite-derived correction signals and integrity information to guide the aircraft safely during its approach and landing. This demonstrates India's growing capability to provide precision navigation even at airports where installing or maintaining ground-based landing infrastructure may not be economically feasible.

The achievement is particularly significant because it validates GAGAN's capability to support Performance-Based Navigation (PBN) and satellite-guided precision approaches for modern commercial jet aircraft. Earlier, GAGAN-supported approaches had mainly been demonstrated on smaller regional ATR turboprop aircraft. The successful operation on an Airbus A320 marked the system's readiness for larger commercial jet operations, representing a significant step towards wider adoption across India's aviation sector.

How Does GAGAN Work?

GAGAN operates through a sophisticated yet well-integrated network spread across the country.

Its major components include:

Component	Number	Function
Indian Reference Stations (INRES)	15	Monitor GPS signals and detect errors
Indian Master Control Centres (INMCC)	2	Process data and calculate corrections
Indian Land Uplink Stations (INLUS)	3	Send corrected information to satellites
Communication Networks	4	Ensure secure real-time connectivity
Geostationary Satellites	3	Broadcast corrected navigation signals

The three Indian satellites carrying GAGAN payloads are:

- GSAT-8
- GSAT-10
- GSAT-15

They continuously transmit corrected navigation information across the service region, because these satellites remain fixed over the same point on Earth.

GAGAN and NavIC: Understanding the Difference

There is often confusion between GAGAN and NavIC (Navigation with Indian Constellation). Although both are integral components of India's indigenous satellite navigation ecosystem, they serve distinct purposes. NavIC is India's independent regional navigation satellite system that provides positioning, navigation and timing services, whereas GAGAN is a Satellite-Based Augmentation System (SBAS) that enhances GPS by providing real-time correction and integrity information to support precise and safe aircraft navigation.

GAGAN

- Satellite-Based Augmentation System (SBAS)
- Improves GPS accuracy
- Provides correction and integrity information
- Primarily supports civil aviation
- Enhances aircraft navigation and landing

NavIC

- Independent regional navigation satellite system
- Provides positioning, navigation and timing services
- Covers India and about 1,500 km beyond its borders
- Serves multiple civilian and strategic users

Expanding India's Global Navigation Footprint

India's ambitions extend well beyond its borders. In 2025, India signed an agreement with South Africa to establish a NavIC reference station, demonstrating growing international confidence in Indian satellite navigation technologies. Meanwhile, GAGAN has been designed to operate seamlessly with international augmentation systems, ensuring interoperability with global aviation networks. This compatibility is particularly important because aircraft routinely fly across multiple countries using different navigation systems.

Applications Beyond Aviation

Although aviation remains GAGAN's primary beneficiary, its accurate positioning capability supports numerous sectors.

Maritime Navigation

- Safer coastal navigation
- Improved offshore operations
- Better vessel positioning

Road Transport

- Intelligent transport systems
- Fleet management
- Route optimisation

Railways

- Improved operational efficiency
- Enhanced safety monitoring

Disaster Management

- Accurate location tracking during emergencies
- Faster rescue and relief operations

Defence and Security

- Improved navigation support
- Greater operational effectiveness

Telecommunications

- Reliable timing and network synchronisation

Surveying and Mapping

- Greater accuracy in land surveys
- Better geospatial information

These applications demonstrate how investments in space technology often generate benefits across the wider economy.

Why GAGAN Matters Strategically

GAGAN is far more than an aviation project.

It strengthens India's:

- Technological self-reliance
- Space-based infrastructure
- Aviation safety standards
- Global competitiveness
- Strategic autonomy

As aviation becomes increasingly dependent on satellite navigation, indigenous capabilities reduce vulnerability arising from excessive reliance on foreign systems. Moreover, India's success in developing an internationally certified SBAS enhances its standing as an emerging space power capable of delivering sophisticated public infrastructure.

Global Perspective

Around the world, satellite-based augmentation systems are becoming central to modern aviation. Countries are gradually moving away from expensive ground-based navigation aids towards satellite-enabled approaches that offer:

- Better safety
- Lower infrastructure costs
- Greater airport accessibility
- Reduced flight delays
- Improved fuel efficiency

India's successful deployment of GAGAN places it firmly within this global transition towards satellite-driven air navigation. It also opens opportunities for regional cooperation, technology exports and greater participation in international aviation standards.

GAGAN at a Glance

- GAGAN stands for GPS Aided GEO Augmented Navigation.
- It is India's indigenous Satellite-Based Augmentation System (SBAS).
- Developed jointly by the Indian Space Research Organisation (ISRO) and the Airports Authority of India (AAI).
- Fully operational since 2015.
- Enhances GPS by providing real-time correction and integrity information for safer aircraft navigation.
- The first SBAS in the world certified for operations in the equatorial region.
- GAGAN payloads are carried on the geostationary satellites GSAT-8, GSAT-10 and GSAT-15.
- In June 2026, India successfully conducted its first satellite-based landing system approach on a commercial jet aircraft using GAGAN.

Why GAGAN is a Game Changer

GAGAN represents a significant milestone in India's journey towards technological self-reliance and advanced aviation infrastructure. By delivering highly accurate and reliable satellite-based navigation, it enhances flight safety, improves air traffic management and reduces dependence on costly ground-based landing systems. Beyond aviation, its applications extend to maritime navigation, road transport, railways, disaster management, defence, telecommunications, surveying and geospatial mapping. As a globally certified indigenous navigation technology, GAGAN strengthens India's strategic capabilities, supports innovation-led growth and reinforces the country's emergence as a leading space and technology power.

Challenges

Despite its achievements, several priorities remain for the future.

India will need to:

- Expand satellite-based landing procedures across more airports.
- Increase adoption among airlines.
- Upgrade supporting infrastructure.
- Integrate GAGAN more deeply with emerging air traffic management systems.
- Continue enhancing cybersecurity and system resilience.

Addressing these areas will maximise the benefits of indigenous satellite navigation.

The Road Ahead

The future of Indian aviation will increasingly depend upon precise satellite navigation. As airports expand, air traffic rises and drones become more common, systems like GAGAN will become indispensable.

Alongside NavIC, GAGAN is expected to strengthen India's navigation ecosystem by supporting safer aviation, smarter transport, efficient disaster response and improved public services. It reflects the growing convergence of space technology, infrastructure development and national security.

In many ways, GAGAN symbolises India's transformation from a user of advanced navigation technologies to a creator of globally recognised solutions. By combining indigenous innovation with international standards, India has built a system that not only secures its skies but also reinforces its ambition to emerge as a leading space and technology power in the twenty-first century.

■ India Unveils Fisher-Centric LoA Framework for Sustainable Blue Economy

India has introduced a new fisher-centric Letter of Authorisation (LoA) framework that enables Indian-flagged fishing vessels to legally undertake regulated fishing in the Exclusive Economic Zone (EEZ) and the high seas. Launched by Vice President Shri C. P. Radhakrishnan in Bhubaneswar on July 9, 2026, the framework replaces the earlier limited and fragmented system with a transparent, fully digital authorisation process. The new LoA framework provides vessel-specific online authorisation through the ReALCraft Fishing Vessel Registration Portal. It also requires compliance with international conservation norms, including catch limits, gear regulations and reporting requirements, ensuring sustainable fishing practices. The new framework is expected to open access to high-value marine resources such as tuna, improve fishers' livelihoods, strengthen fisheries cooperatives and Fish Farmer Producer Organisations (FFPOs), and create new opportunities across the seafood value chain, from harvesting and processing to exports. Alongside the LoA, the Government also launched the Odisha Deep Sea Fishing Mission (2026-2036) to promote deep-sea fishing, modern infrastructure and the sustainable growth of India's Blue Economy.
